'Such an honor'

Students recognized for efforts in class, on ice

U.S. Figure Skating's Program Development Committee is excited to once again recognize a record number of high school students as part of its Graduating Seniors Program. Now in its seventh year, the program recognizes students for their achievements on the ice and their commitment in the classroom.

This year, the committee bestowed this accolade on more than 750 seniors nationwide.

"This year saw a 20 percent growth in applications from the previous year," Dorothy Tank, national vice chair for school programs, said. "It's thrilling to see the program continue to grow and to see more skaters recognized for their hard work during high school."

Schools are encouraged to present the award at a seniors' award ceremony or graduation; for many recipients, the program provides an opportunity to share their love of skating with classmates and teachers who might be unfamiliar with their passion.

"I was excited that my school presented me with this award," platinum-level recipient Angelina McNulty said. "It was the first time I was able to share my success as a skater with my classmates."

That sentiment was echoed by platinum-level recipient Kelly Lansdell's mother, Sandy.

"We're so thankful for the Graduating Seniors Program," Sandy said. "It's such an honor for Kelly to be recognized amongst her other schoolmates."

The award program features an online application with specific criteria. The award program is divided into four designation levels: platinum, gold, silver and bronze. The specific level designation is awarded based on the skater's highest verified test achievement or competitive accomplishment. This year, 19 percent of recipients received honors at the platinum level, 38 percent at the gold level, 32 percent at the silver level and 11 percent at the bronze level.

The Graduating Seniors Program Award helps to bridge the gap from high school to college, and gives skaters a sense of pride in what they have achieved throughout their high school career.

"Earning this award shows me how much I have improved through my 13 years of skating" silver-level recipient Melissa Henderson said. "Knowing that I was struggling to land my Axel about a year ago, and now I can land almost all my doubles, proves that anyone can improve with hard work; receiving this award is a great demonstration of that."

The application for seniors graduating in the spring of 2018 will be available on U.S. Figure Skating's website this fall. For more information regarding the Graduating Seniors Program, contact U.S. Figure Skating Programs Manager Karissa Woienski at kwoienski@usfigureskating.org.
